

By Their Fruits She Knew Them
In her draped and darkened tent the amateur palmist was telling fortunes for the charity bazaar.
"Ah," she said with slow impressiveness to the fair maiden who impatiently awaited her fate. "I see by your hand that you are going to be married."

"How wonderful!" breathed the client with a blush and a giggle.
"And," went on the wise one, a note of acerbity creeping into her voice, "I see the happy one is to be Mr. Binks."

"But surely," demurred the maid, "you cannot read that from the lines in my hand."

"Lines nothing," exclaimed the sybil with sudden scorn. "You are wearing the ring I returned to Mr. Binks three weeks ago."

A Good Idea

The little daughter had been praying each evening at bedtime for a baby sister.

The other morning her mother, reading the paper, exclaimed:

"I see Mrs. Smith has a little daughter."

"How do you know that?" asked the child.

"I read it in the paper," answered the mother.

"Read it to me," said the daughter. The mother read: "Born on March —, to Mr. and Mrs. — Smith, a daughter."

The child thought a moment, then said:

"I know what I am going to do. I'm going to stop praying and begin advertising."

Peculiar Englishman

A Frenchman was commenting on the strange habits of Englishmen.

"Why, you can see it every time an Englishman drinks a glass of whiskey," he said.

"How is that?" he was asked.

"Why, he puts in sugar to make it sweet and lemon to make it sour, ice to make it cold and spice to make it hot, and says, 'Here's to you!' and drinks it himself."

Rather Hoped He Would

"Did you see my sunburst last night," inquired the pompous Mrs. Newrich of her poorer neighbor.

"No, I didn't," said the neighbor, caustically; "but I certainly thought he would if he ate another bite."

Poor Fool

"Hi see 'Arvy got a job."

"He did. Well, well. Some folks will do anything for money."
